Auditor Irwin Heads Delegation To Columbus Today

SALEM REQUESTS
$14,000 FOR NEEDY

Receipts and Expenditures In Previous Years Listed

A delegation of Columbiana county officials was in Columbus today to outline needs before state welfare commission, asking for money for welfare work among the poor in cities, villages and townships.

Irwin Heads Group
County Auditor John H. Irwin, Commissioner John M. Kerr, Commissioners Clerk L. H. Johnson, Irvin Vondran, bookkeeper in the auditor's office, Assistant Prosecutor George Lafferty and Austin I. Getz, commissioner-elect, composed the delegation.

The money to be requested by the body for welfare work in the county is planned for expenditure during January and February. Of the total amount East Liverpool is asking for $29,050 while Wellsville requests $15,000.

Salem Asks $14,000
Mayor John M. Davidson, member of the county unemployment relief executive committee, reported that this city expected to obtain $14,000 for relief work here.

As the county group and the state representatives work out plans for the administration of relief, it is expected that the figures on 1930 and 1931 relief, receipts and expenditures, will be used to some extent as a basis.

(By Associated Press)
COLUMBUS, Dec. 29.—Tentative budgets of county relief organizations for January and February, were submitted to the state relief commission here today.

The tentative figures include only the money county and city officials figure they will need from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, to carry on relief work among destitute.

Cuyahoga county (Cleveland) presented no budget for the two month period. Officials of the department explained it would have available for relief work during that period $2,050,000 from its own funds.

The largest requests were presented by Hamilton county, which said it would need $1,009,101.

Mahoning Asks $304,927
Other tentative figures submitted were: Mahoning county, $304,927; Montgomery county, $290,200; Stark county, $298,716; Summit county, $281,341; Toledo $430,700 and Trumbull county $154,415.

Columbus submitted a budget of $385,910, but the tentative request by the commission was only $285,610. The commission said that by diverting $100,000 from the gasoline tax fund the city could get along on the $285,910 budget.

Requests for relief money approved by the commission included: Utility excise bond issues: Shelby county $7,200 and Licking county $30,000.

Basing his calculation on some of the figures submitted at today's hearing, Adj. General Frank D. Henderson, a member of the commission, said the state would have to dig up about $12,000,000 for relief work for the next year.

BUSY SESSION FOR ASSEMBLY

Relief, Prohibition and Taxation Loom As Most Important

(By Associated Press)
COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 29.—Relief legislation, retention or rejection of state constitutional prohibition and taxation will be the more important subjects to come before the Ohio legislature when it meets in regular session, beginning January 2.

While it is expected that a flood of new laws will be suggested by some legislators, others will fight any not deemed absolutely necessary to solve immediate problems of the day.

Many of the law-makers, who are opposing what they term "unnecessary legislation," will have the backing of the administration of Governor George White in the battle to stem the tide of new laws. But other members of the assembly are in a different frame of mind—as witnesses of the fact that one representative alone had 50 bills ready for the hopper.

Relief Is Big Task
It is expected that administration forces will lead the fight for unemployment relief legislation. They will seek one new source of tax revenue for relief purposes and

Cleaner's Tag Used To Locate Bandit

CHICAGO, Dec. 29.—An insignificant looking cleaner's tag proved, police said, to be the undoing of a confessed bank bandit under arrest here today.

For it was largely through the tag found secreted under a rock in the Kentucky Hills that Police Chief Ernest Thompson of Lexington, Ky., said he traced Frank Glendy, 26, to Chicago.

Glendy was arrested last night and confessed police said to taking groundpound in a bank holdup on Nov. 22 in which a bank employee was fatally shot.

Age Limits Fixed For Police Jobs
The age limit for applicants for the vacancy in the police department created by the death of Patrolman Wilbur Hiddleston, today was fixed at 25 to 40 years in an announcement by civil service commission members.

The commission previously had announced 21 to 40 as the limits. The examination will be held Jan. 16.

"Well, Y' See, Officer, It's Like This—"

"Pshaw!" Says Patrolman; "I'd Like To Hear a New One!"

Motorists—when you start making your New Year's resolutions also think up a few new alibis when you get tickets for traffic violations in 1933. Police suggested this today.

For, according to Traffic Patrolman Ralph Stoffer, police here have heard practically every type of excuse and alibi possible; they are heard over and over again, and patrolmen believe it's time for some brand new ones.

Because the motorist, when handed a ticket by a patrolman, has little time to "think up a legal excuse, he presents the first alibi that comes to his mind and there's plenty of humor in them. "There's no ananias like a traffic violation," according to the patrolman.

Leave It to the Ladies
Women, Stoffer said, are quicker—when it comes to originating alibis than the males of the species and provide the officers with the most laughs. They say that "my child tore the ticket up" or that "I didn't see a ticket on the car". Others alibi that "the dentist held me up" or "I was detained by the hair dresser", adding also, that "I was only there for a minute."

Motorists don't realize, Stoffer explained, that there is nothing personal in their enforcement of traffic laws, that patrolmen are bound by oath to give out traffic tickets when violations occur and that if those statements offered as alibis were the truth, the tags would never have been stuck on the windshield.

Often, he said, violations come unconsciously, for instance when a driver parks, "for just a minute," in a no-parking zone then meets a friend and stops to discuss the weather or the neighbor's new dress.

Stoffer Collects 'em
Stoffer has made a collection of the alibis so often presented.

SENATOR HURT IN AUTO CRASH

Two Others Killed When Four Autos Collide On Icy Highway

(By Associated Press)
GRIMSBY, Ont., Dec. 29.—Two persons were killed, and seven others, including State Senator Joseph N. Ackerman of Ohio, were injured near here last night when four automobiles collided on an icy highway.

Senator Ackerman suffered a broken nose, James McElroy of Shaker Heights, O., sustained a broken leg. His son, James Jr., 14, who is champion junior amateur speed skater of the United States, suffered severe facial lacerations. Herbert Ackman, son of the senator, escaped without injury.

The two killed were Alan MacCauley, 36, of Welland, Ont., and his wife.

The other injured were Harold MacCauley, 12, son of the dead couple; Florent Heuter, of Grimsby, and Edgar Heuter, his brother.

Ackerman said his automobile struck the MacCauleys' car when the latter skidded across the highway. A moment later, when Mr. and Mrs. MacCauley had just been dragged from their car, another automobile struck the wreckage, knocked Mrs. MacCauley into a ditch and dragged her husband about 25 feet, the senator said.

A fourth car then hit the wreckage, injuring the Heuter brothers who had appeared on the scene as rescue workers. They suffered only bruises, as did also Alan Swan, who was driving the MacCauleys' car.

Deep Sea Fishing Sought by Hoover

With President Hoover in Florida, Dec. 29.—President Hoover speeded up the leisurely southern cruise of his fishing fleet today in an attempt to reach the deep sea game fishing grounds off Palm Beach by tonight instead of tomorrow and get in an extra day of angling.

Under orders to hoist anchors before daybreak, the Presidential flotilla turned toward an outlet of the Florida Inland passage into the open Atlantic in the vicinity of Fort Pierce.

Lawrence Richey, one of Mr. Hoover's secretaries, explained that the unexpected speed was a result of the chief executive's decision that the deep sea haunts of the game fish might as well be reached as soon as possible. The luck of the fleet hasn't been so good so far.

Indian's King?

Lost during a flight from Brunswick, Ga., to Rio de Janeiro, in 1927, Paul Redfern, well-known American aviator, was recently reported alive and well in the jungle regions of Mato Grosso, Brazil. The report, made by Charles Hassler, an explorer, states that Redfern is living with docile and semi-civilized Indians who treat him as a king.

CHARITY CHECK REVEALS SANTA GOOD TO NEEDY

840 Vouchers Issued By Associated Charities, Secretary Shows

AID IS SUPPLIED TO 150 FAMILIES

450 Children Entertained; Garden Club Helps Supply Toys

The large amount of charity done for Salem's needy through efforts of Salem Associated Charities, with which 50 of the city's civic, fraternal and social units are affiliated, is revealed in a report today by Mrs. John C. Litty, secretary of the organization. Approximately 150 families benefited.

Eight hundred and forty vouchers were sent out Mrs. Litty said. Each voucher represents one dollar, and from two to eight dollars, in vouchers, were sent to these homes, the amount being according to the size of the families and their needs.

Merchant Keeps Account
Recipients of these vouchers then take them to any merchant in the city to purchase food, clothing, shoes or medicine. The merchant who receives the voucher must make an itemized account of what it is spent for and report back to the charities.

Four hundred and fifty children were entertained at the Christmas party at the Elks home, sponsored by the organization.

Each child received a package containing fruit, nuts, candy, animal crackers and sugar, and also a toy.

The Salem Garden club, civic organization, provided a large number of new toys, making it possible for each child to receive one toy, officials report.

Draw For Large Toys
Of the large toys, such as autos, dolls, doll carriages, etc., there were not enough to go around, so each child was given a number for a drawing on these, these, in charge feeling this would be an equal way of distribution.

Other entertainment for the kiddies was provided by the Waiken brothers, picture show managers, who gave them free shows, and a skating party at the rink on South Ellsworth ave.

Gandhi's Release Reported Nearing

LONDON, Dec. 29.—Rumors of the possibility of the Mahatma Mohandas K. Gandhi's early release from prison, for some time current in India and England have been revived with the conclusion here last Saturday of the third India round table conference.

Next Tuesday will be the anniversary of Gandhi's arrest and imprisonment in Yeroda jail at Poona, India, for his refusal to postpone a "disobedience campaign" against British rule. Later he declared he would remain in prison until India was granted independence.

Good Way to Celebrate New Year--Charity Show--It Has Everything but Headaches!

Great Array of Motion Picture Talent Lined Up For Red Cross Benefit at State Theater

There will be a variety of manners and ways in which Salem residents will celebrate the passing of 1932 and the advent of the New Year but an event which is expected to attract an unusually large attendance is that Red Cross charity show which will be staged at the State theater Saturday night.

A great variety of talking screen entertainment will be offered, starting at 11:30 p. m. and every nickel obtained at the box office or from the advance sale of tickets now being conducted by committeemen will go to aid the Red Cross in its welfare work among needy families of the community.

Tickets are being sold at the Farmers National and First National banks, the J. H. Lease Drug Company store, State theater and The Salem News. Various members of the committee in charge of the show are also offering the tickets for sale.

Unusually low prices prevail for the show, the second annual event of its kind held here, in view of the fact that an ultra-attractive menu of screen entertainment has been arranged.

The main feature is a new production, entitled, "Night After Night" and starring the latest screen sensation, George Raft. Others in the cast include Constance Cummings, who was Harold Lloyd's leading lady in his last film, Wynne Gibson, Mae West and Allison Skipworth, star of "Madame Racketeer."

This is a story of the people who live at No. 55 West, once a respectable residence but now a speakeasy. The plot deals with these folks, the shady ones who reside and go there now and the ones who lived there years ago and who are unable to forget the place. It is a study in characters, each of different makeup.

Then too, there are added attractions, including a two reel comedy "Hey Hey" Westerner with a musical background, dancing girls and singing cow boys; an organologue and Roger Wolf Kahn and his band featured in "The Yacht Party" with musical novelties.

Uncle Sam Refunds Income Tax Money; Actors To Benefit

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, Dec. 29.—That very pleasant feeling you get when you find you have been overcharged and get some of your money back has come to thousands of individuals and business houses.

Several refunds amounted to more than a million dollars. The United Fruit company of Boston got $2,960,000, the largest. The sum of $1,218,000 was returned to the Lehigh and Wilkesbarre Coal company of Pennsylvania.

Mrs. Anne Morrow Lindbergh received $1,676; J. Henry Roraback, Republican national committeeman for Connecticut, $10,162; former Senator Henry J. Allen of Kansas, $2,468, and Roy D. Chapin, secretary of commerce, $3,746.

Douglas Fairbanks, movie star, received $72,186. Ramon Novarro got $7,604 and other personalities of the movie industry who got lesser amounts were Conrad Nagel, Louis B. Mayer, Charles Rogers, Irene Rich, Mrs. Adolphe Menjou, and Mrs. Ernest Lubitsch.

The grand total compared with $69,476,950 refunded in the 1931 fiscal year, the increase being due in a large measure to a court ruling that the federal government could not tax incomes of incompetent Oklahoma Indians from oil land rights.

Mystery Surrounds Matrimonial Plans of Virginia Dawes

(By Associated Press)
EVANSTON, Ill., Dec. 29.—The Herald and Examiner today said there was considerable mystery about the matrimonial intentions of 18-year-old Virginia Dawes, adopted daughter of former Vice President Charles G. Dawes.

Reports had it the paper said, that Miss Dawes would visit Commander and Mrs. E. Hunter Tennant in Washington. She was formally reported engaged to their son, Ensign John Gardner Tennant, last June.

But the Herald and Examiner said, Mrs. Dawes gave denial to the report, declaring Virginia "was not going out of town over the holidays." She also made it clear it was said, that she considered the engagement a thing of the past.

Some time ago Miss Dawes created a furore at Northwestern university, where she is a freshman, by wearing the fraternity pin of James Martin, who was working at a gasoline filling station to earn his college expenses. She returned the pin, she said.

Ohio's Employment Condition Unchanged

COLUMBUS, Dec. 29.—While coal mining was active in several districts, employment as a whole in Ohio, showed little change during November as compared with October, it was shown by the monthly report of the United States department of agriculture.

Manufactories remained on curtailed schedules and employment in textile mills dropped off slightly. Several automobile accessory plants reported full time operations, but automobile factories continued dull.

The report as a whole indicated that changes during the month however slight, were toward gradual improvement.

SALINEVILLE MAN CAUGHT IN CRASH

S. Floyd Keener, Salem, Recovering from Injuries In Recent Mishap

Two Columbiana county men were fatally injured in two highway traffic accidents occurring in the East Liverpool district within four hours Wednesday night.

The dead are:
John Thomas Laney, 42, Salineville coal miner.
Earl Springer, 50, of 1219 Fairmount st., East Liverpool, a painter.

Springer died of a fractured skull in East Liverpool City hospital after he was struck by an automobile driven by Robert Hickman, 23, of near East Liverpool rd. at 8 p. m.

Exonerate Driver
Police today exonerated Hickman, Springer is said to have been walking in the middle of the road, the fender of Hickman's machine striking him and knocking him to the pavement.

Laney died in the Liverpool City hospital at 6:30 p. m. yesterday, two hours after his automobile, driven by his son Paul, crashed into a machine driven by Delbert Gardner, Salineville, near the Carroll county line, west of Salineville.

Laney and his son were enroute home from the John Hirst Coal Co. mine where they are employed. Their auto collided with the other machine, owned by William Scott, as it was being backed out of a driveway at the home of John Bridgett.

Didn't See Other Car
Laney's son said he did not see the other machine. He sustained cuts and bruises and was taken to his home. The elder Laney was rushed to the East Liverpool hospital where he was found to have a fractured skull.

S. Floyd Keener of 401 Highland ave., who was injured recently when his automobile crashed into a culvert east of Lisbon, was reported in an improved condition today.

Keener was enroute to Pittsburgh where he had planned to obtain transportation by airplane to New York City.

His machine was crowded from the road and crashed into the culvert. He is suffering from lacerations and bruises.

Henry Baxter, 82, Dies; Once Owned Stove Plant Here

Funeral service for Thomas Henry Baxter, 82, who died early Monday morning at the home of his daughter, Mrs. John S. Simpson, Franklin township, near Mansfield, following a lingering illness, was held Wednesday afternoon at the Funerock funeral home, Mansfield. Rev. Ellington, pastor of the Pleasant Valley Baptist church, was in charge. Interment was in Mansfield cemetery.

Mr. Baxter, son of Thomas Baxter, was born in Hanoverton. His family operated the Baxter Stove company plant in Salem years ago. The plant was located where the Salem Tool company buildings now stand.

Surviving are four daughters: Mrs. Ada Stevens, Cleveland; Mrs. Fannie Stafford, Chicago; Mrs. Simpson, at whose home he died, and Mrs. Donald Spoyde, Mansfield; two brothers, Edwin D. Baxter, Mansfield, and Berry Baxter, Alta Dent, Cal.; five grandchildren and one great grandchild.

Let 'em Run It

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Dec. 28.—Mr. Hoover has gone on south-fishing. And from what I read in the papers the Democrats are planning for him. I believe I will just keep right on fishing. I have always believed he made a mistake by not stepping out and turning the whole thing over to 'em on Dec. 1.

There wasn't a chance of him and them agreeing on anything. It would have been a great big thing to have done.

As it is now we have two more months of loggerheading and an extra session of Congress. I would even leave 'em now and say, "Boys, it looks easy, maybe you can fix everything before March 4."

The Democrats would have to dig up some schemes mighty fast. Mr. Hoover would come out sitting pretty pretty. There wouldn't be a Republican on the Potomac to lay anything on to as it is now this is just a grudge Congress.

"Where can we lay the blame, Congress?"

Yours,
Will Rogers

SALES TAX ISN'T KILLED

The public hears with apprehension the report of the president-elect's vigorous denials that he ever entertained favor for a general manufacturers' sales tax. Governor Roosevelt's protest is followed immediately by a statement from the next vice president, to the effect that his chief's attitude effectively kills off the tax as far as the short session of congress is concerned.

That the sales tax's status has been changed an iota by Mr. Roosevelt's pronouncement is doubtful. The tax has existed only as an idea suggesting in itself a logical application to the revenue problems of the next few years. It has had no legislative form this session, and aside from President Hoover's endorsement, no authoritative support. Congressmen have speculated on its possibilities without venturing to carry their speculation into action.

There could be, therefore, no possibility of killing it—certainly not for the duration of the last session of one congress, with the implication that it might be revived in the next congress. If Governor Roosevelt really is opposed to the principle of sales taxation—and that point is far from clear—why should Mr. Garner take the trouble to leave a door open for action in the new Democratically controlled congress?

It is puzzling. Intentionally or not, the governor has caused to be attached to his recent words on the subject an implication of violent disagreement with sales tax advocates. Remembering that many of the good minds inside and outside his party have been forced to consider a manufacturers' sales tax as the only way out of an acutely serious tax situation, a considerable number of people who have been watching the next president for signs of his undeclared policies will wonder exactly what the public is expected to believe.

Certain it is that the president-elect is putting his leadership to a crucial test by being quoted as "horrible" at an idea that was given Democratic support in the last session of congress. Neither the idea nor its champions will be frightened away easily—at least not until a better one is proposed.

MORE OF EVERYTHING

There is a familiar ring to the story that Japan's war department plans to bolster itself. Similar announcements from all countries form part of the background with which people of today are painfully familiar. They have come from France, from Great Britain from Italy, from Spain. With variations, they have been heard in the United States.

There are many other things about Japan's situation which are familiar, too. The national purse has been stretched all out of proportion by the burden of military expenditures. Among unavoidable expenses inflicted by conditions of the times are relief for farmers and relief for creditors. With a budget in which revenue lags behind expenditure by 70 per cent, the government is obliged to listen to the armament terrorists explaining that it isn't safe to wait any longer for modernization of equipment.

Bankers, industrialists and economists who have failed to be impressed with the necessity the militarists describe are protesting through their organizations. There even is a Japan Economic League and of course, the Japanese chamber of commerce. Both are on the firing line fighting for reduction of expenditures and a return to common sense.

Taxes already burdensome cannot be increased, according to the fiscal experts. Despite the willingness of the people to do everything in their power to make their nation the biggest and best of all they no longer have the power it takes to pay the bills—at least not in the present. The vast deficit in anticipated revenue, consequently, will be made up by borrowing. Future generations of Japanese can share the hardship that was required back in the third decade of the 19th century to give their nation a little larger place on the map.

Japan's taste for occidental ways and ideas has led it into paths untouched by oriental feet. Along those paths an ambitious people have progressed far in the direction of industrialism and militarism, according to the conceptions of a mechanical age. They have found what they sought—a place of leadership in the orient. One suspects they are not so enthusiastic about the deficits that come in the wake of bombing planes and machine guns.

WASHINGTON DRIZZLY
WHAT, NO SALES TAX?
THE BABY, INVISIBLE

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Drizzling, foggy weather here. Many of the Washington "big bugs" are away. The small fry, not protected by civil service, are wondering. They would like to know what will happen after March 4.

LINCOLN sits safe inside his fine monument. Washington's white stone shaft points toward the sky and immortality. Their troubles are over.

You look up toward "the hill" where stands the big capitol dome. Plenty of troubles under that and problems and disorders.

Where horses pull in different directions, the load does not move rapidly, and that is how our government horses pull. Perhaps it is all for the best in the best possible of worlds.

Possibly some better plan could be devised, and necessity may force that better plan to the front.

RUMORS say the new President, Governor Roosevelt, was "horrible" at the suggestion that he would support a sales tax. It is to be hoped the rumor is mistaken. If President Roosevelt prevents a sales tax he will be doubly "horrible" by the financial situation on his hands.

Not even a Roosevelt can balance a budget with hopes or wishes, and the country is running behind more than $100,000,000 a month. What will our intelligent and beloved country do when it is no longer possible for the treasury to shovel out hundreds of millions to corporations that need the money?

INTERESTING family gathering in a South Carolina penitentiary. Mrs. Beatrice Snipes, condemned to death for killing a rural policeman, was allowed to see in the prison room her husband, serving a seven-month sentence in connection with the same killing, and her seven-year-old boy. Several offered to adopt the boy, but she is giving him to an uncle.

Present also at the gathering, but not visible, was the child soon to be born to Mrs. Snipes in the penitentiary.

They will wait until that child is born before executing her. Justice did not always do that and is improving.

Aches As Weather Barometer.

Rheumatism is one disorder that has baffled science for a long time. It used to be regarded as belonging exclusively to the aged.

Don't you remember how your grandparents complained of their "rheumatiz"? Their aches and discomforts were used as a barometer to forecast rainy weather. Contrary to the old belief, the disease afflicts children as well as adults.

Rheumatism is an inflammation of the muscles or joints of the body. It is a painful condition, often confused with neuritis, arthritis, and gout.

Through great advances have been made in the study of rheumatism, the exact germ responsible for it is not known.

Complications Dangerous

The acute form of rheumatism is spoken of as "acute rheumatic fever." Intense pain and high fever confine the sufferer to bed for many weeks. Though the disease itself is seldom fatal, its complications may continue as a menace to health and, in some instances, to life.

The danger of complications can be avoided by the early recognition of the disease. The patient will be kept in bed and follow his doctor's orders.

Involvement of the heart is one of the things that may happen in acute rheumatic fever. Too many children are annually disabled by the heart complications.

I am sorry to say that the diagnosis of rheumatism is often made after the damage has been done. This is particularly true in the case of children. If your child complains of pain in the arms, legs or joints, do not ignore it.

There is no such thing as a "growing pain." The pain commonly given this name is not due to a child growing too fast. Very likely the pain is due to rheumatism and it demands investigation.

Traced to Infection

Many cases of rheumatism can be traced to centers of pus infection, such as infected teeth, tonsils, or nasal sinuses. It is important to get rid of all the possible causes of trouble. To this end careful search will be needed. The teeth may not ache yet when they are X-rayed, definite signs of decay and infection are found. The X-ray is of value too in revealing a diseased gall bladder, infected sinuses, chronic appendicitis and other disturbances which may be responsible for the rheumatic pains.

Though rheumatism is more common among those who are poorly housed and poorly fed, it is seen in all classes of persons living in damp places, exposure to cold and wet lack of fresh air, sunshine and proper food, must be considered as factors of importance in this disease.

The diet should be simple, nutritious and easily digested. It should include milk, cream, butter, eggs and other foods which carry vitamin A.

The Stars Say:

For Friday, December 30

The astral testimonies noted in this day's map make for a rather mediocre state of affairs, although there may develop some unexpected opportunity for change, travel or fresh associations or interests. Business and all pertaining to writings, publishing promotion and kindred matters may have fair success, but do not jeopardize the presaged good prospects by sarcastic speech or slight flurries of "brainstorm."

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a rather mediocre year, with little of magnitude entering into the personal affairs. A child born on this day should be sharp and quick in its mental operations, giving rise to caustic or offensive speech to its peril. However, it should be clever, witty or genial and independent.

NEW YORK
Day by Day
by O.O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Dec. 29—At a dinner the other evening, a woman novelist suddenly paused in the midst of bright talk, paled and exclaimed: "There's a cat in this house!" All her remembering years she has felt a psychological presence of felines, freezing her into stiff horror.

She was so unnerved she had to go home. It developed there was a very docile Persian locked in a room in the rear of the house. This phobia, I am told, is not uncommon. Bernhard suffered from it and once felt swooning in front of Florian's Venice cafe when a cat jumped in her lap.

There is not the tolerance for cats there is for dogs. People like cats or dislike them thoroughly. New York has five times more cats than dogs. The majority prowl warehouse districts, but there are those pedigreed ones bringing as high as $1,500 each. Newsy McMein has the finest collection.

Every theatre has its mascot cat, and on several occasions they have innocently interrupted plays by ambling across stage unconcernedly during tense moments. One of New York's best known cats was an enormous black for years in a flower shop window next to the Hippodrome.

Ten years ago a gripping mystery play was received with high enthusiasm by critics. But did not last the week. There was a scene where a miser sat in a dark hovel surrounded by a dozen cats. It was found too late that an audience reaction to cats kept the crowd away.

Speaking of cats, Roy Howard recently got his mouse in Canada. Somebody asked him what he was going to do with the antlers. He isn't certain but thinks of putting them on the family cat to give the mice an especial fright.

New York firemen train themselves to fall asleep anywhere at any time and despite interruptions of their calling there is never insomnia among them. Of all workers, they sleep always on the brink of battle. At any moment changing bells may arouse them from dreams to the reality of an inferno of flame—a house reeling scarlet against the sky. And mayhap, high above the smoke, a life in peril!

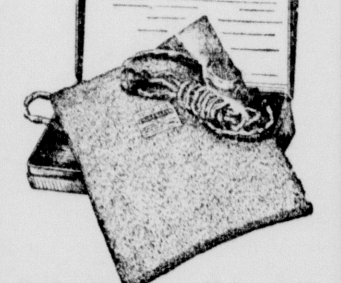

Grace Moore, going inconspicuously from musical shows to grand opera, returned to the stage with "The greatest popularity she had ever known." She is another small-town girl—Jellie, Tenn.—who became a "toast of the city."

Miss Moore, as I recall, made her first New York stage appearance in one of the early musical nonsense of the Marx brothers. I remember a critic at the time wrote of her: "A slim lady with a slim part and doubtless a slim future."

Thingumabob: Fannie Hurst has a two-pound South American monkey named "Ghandi." The Allen Dwyers are living in London with Dean booked to direct many English films. Tullio Carminati is so sensitive he does not read drama.

Alfred Salston (above), of New York, had ambitious visions of making a fortune teaching the young ladies of Rome how to trip the light fantastic in the American manner. So he stowed away to Italy on the liner Augustus. But Mussolini's lynx-eyed guards spotted him, and here he is as he arrived back home on the Conte Grande.

George White displayed vivid showmanship at the opening of his variety show. He was in the wings when the finale sprawled into a fumble. In the hurry of production it had been rehearsed but once. After a wait and with the audience in a tremble of wonder, White popped before the footlights, apologized. Then rehearsed the closing informally. After a few starts, it went through without a hitch, brought the audience to its feet and so pleased White he went into an impromptu soft-shoe dance.

Fred Astaire, with thin hair and the yappish-look of a drug store cowboy, dances steps any small-time hooper would regard as second rate. Yet so finished is his artistry that when he hops upon a chair or bounds across a table top he receives a salvo of cheers. And leaves the ladies ga-ga.

And Luella Gear cannot be topped for putting over a smart line. After four sabbatical years, she returns to the stage ringing frantically for a porter in a British hotel. Finally she is asked if she rang. Instantly she replies: "Well, I've been chiming a little!"

City Wed

SYNOPSIS

Nevis and Bill Lancaster's ideal married life is of short duration. Complications set in when Bill makes a success selling bonds and they live beyond their means. Then Bill meets Olive Blanchard, who tries to win him. Although Bill sees Olive frequently, he loves only Nevis. Nevis, however, believing Bill is having an affair with Olive, encourages the attentions of Harry Carter. News of a friend's divorce makes Nevis realize how near the precipice is her own marriage and she begs Bill to take her away. He secures an inspector's position on a Porto Rican sugar plantation and he and Nevis begin over again. Their former harmony is missing, however. One day, Bill comes upon Nevis innocently holding hands with Harrison, a sugar expert from the States. A scene follows and Harrison's influence affects Bill in business and society. He blames Nevis. The climate disagrees with Nevis and she is homesick but does not complain.

CHAPTER XX

There were days, when walking along the stone veranda, looking out to the beauty of the bay, crawling secretly with waste matter and smelling to high heaven, a delight to the eyes and an offense to the nostrils, turning her slim back upon the mountains which hemmed her in, in a solid menace. Nevis would drive her nails into her palms and shiver half with her usual chills, the forerunner of fever, and half with a bitterness of nostalgia, and would think, "I can't stand it."

"Can't you get on with the women?" Bill asked her. "You used to have a lot of friends at home." Women! Women who asked her about Bill's salary and her relation to the Higher Up; women who fingered her little dresses and discussed quality and price; women who told her the current gossip about other women. "Mrs. Brown, well, the assistant chief engineer stops there every morning at ten for coffee. Brown's away, you know, he's never home till noon. I called once and the shades were down"; women who borrowed books and catalogues and magazines and rouge and powder and perfume; women who wept pitifully because the youngest baby had malaria and there was no chance of getting him home.

She said to herself, "I'll stick it out. I've got to. It's my fault."

There were, of course, happy interludes; times when she and Bill went together to the movies and laughed, hand fast, like children, at the absurd and ancient pictures; times when they went off on little excursions; times when they lay, close embraced in each other's arms, in the dark velvet of a semi-tropical night, with a moon outside their windows as big as a dinner plate and the stars amazingly near, and murmured that they loved one another and were happy.

But Bill had lost weight and color. He was increasingly short-tempered. He threw a native who, pretending to be no English was yet able to curse fluently, full through a window one day and quarreled interminably with one of his superiors, a fat-faced young man, whose neither heat nor mosquitoes could disturb and who was reluctant to permit Bill to know more than he had to hold down his job, lest he lose his own to the novice.

They were not popular and they knew it. They were utterly unable to play the game as it was usually played. They talked too much and too openly.

Bill said seriously: "Darned if I'll let 'em beat me. If I can make the grade, I'll do it. I'll go back to New York when I've learned enough about this business to make me useful to Uncle Walter and I'll give 'em an earful, of misery and graft and a choice paternalistic government which makes spying bootlicking, wretched ruins out of what were once decent and ambitious men."

Nevis warned: "He won't believe you. It won't be to his interest to believe you. It's his business after all, Bill." Bill said, setting a lean jaw his eyes very blue in his brown face: "He'll have to believe me. What do you think I've been doing all this time beside riding the rounds and time clocking and vaccinating bulls and seeing the sugar processed? I've got figures and statistics! And I talked last week to Grayson. They fired him you know—he was the chemist. It's a nice mess."

Nevis said nothing. She leaned back in the wicker chair on the veranda and smoked steadily to keep the mosquitoes away. She thought, "It isn't very different from New York, after all. The people are different and the surroundings as far as background is concerned. But for the rest it is the same, the same idleness and fever heat and rushing about and getting nowhere. The same back-biting and scandal and gossip and hurtling each other."

Bill said, again heavily: "Darned if I'll let them beat me!"

He was discovering a curious fact about himself; an ability to die his teeth in and to hang on; an ability to get ahead doggedly. There was no trading here, on his personality, his charm, his "contacts." He might make friends because of charm and personality; he might be treated a little gingerly by men who were suspicious of him because of his position as Walter Mason's nephew; he might be able to be the social life of a rather dull party because of his talent for mixing. But otherwise it all got him nowhere. Hard work and plenty of it, the capacity for taking it on the chin, the gift for seeing through a situation, outwitting the usual spies, and foreseeing the usual narrow politics, these were the things which counted. How he dressed, what had been his university, what old college friends he had, how well he could put over a sale, helped by a delightful grin and a good luncheon and a flock of drinks didn't count at all. He grew, by degrees, tremendously interested in the industry and in his end of it. Like all young people he was a reformer at heart and burned to reform the entire organization, to say nothing of the business itself. In a very small way he put through several such reforms, including some saving of waste and some saving in time. But these reports never reached Mason. "What the hell is the boy doing down there, anyway," he asked his wife. "Yancy writes very guardedly about him. Wonder if he's hitting it up?"

He was not, save for very occasional lapses, out of sheer boredom, after work. The climate, malaria and liquor did not, he discovered, mix very well. He was, on the whole happier than Nevis. He had a job to do he had something to learn, he had a dogged determination not to give in, and he worked twelve hours a day, and manlike, could find something in common, if only a discussion of past price fights or of present sugar methods, with most of the men he met. And was comfortably unaware that Nevis was any more miserable than the external circumstances warranted.

But she was. She was suffering deeply by the time their first year in Porto Rico had passed, from the jealousy of the other women who refused to understand why the Lancasters were persona grata with the Powers, as Bill made no more money than did their own husbands and had a less influential job. The first eager rush to call, to make friends, to entertain Nevis and Bill died away. And reports were spread, much as in the case of Mrs. Brown, that she and the women very little reason why the Lancasters should receive so much "important" social recognition unless Nevis had "a good deal of influence" with the male executives.

At the end of their first year they were transferred back to the plantation and Bill started out again, riding the cane fields and vaccinating the excessively annoyed bulls, once, in very grave danger of his life when a bull got away from the ropes and hands of the helpers and started to charge the tall enemy with the large and painful instrument of bovine torture in his hand.

Nevis was glad to get back "home." Mrs. Jones had looked after her things for her, the house on stilts was as she had left it. There were fewer people, fewer necessary contacts. She could sit on her porch and watch the ox-carts pad by and depend for her slight outside contacts on Mrs. Jones with her nervous amiability and capacity for friendship.

"Another year and I'll be able to go back and tell them a thing or two!"

She echoed mentally—another year, another eternity! She saw herself growing less and less pretty, more and more faded, more and more prone to slackness in dress and hair and skin and hand care. She had not been able to find Anna again on her return and so was doing all the housework herself, and had learned, in the year, to haggle in Spanish with the tradespeople. She had had one interlude of resolutions their second Christmas, when the people from home sent down great boxes of gifts. Her mother had sent clothes, too. Not purchased in New York, but looking like a Paris trousseau to Nevis. "I don't know," wrote her mother, "what you are able to get down there." Della had sent books and canned delicacies—"Bill caviar and pate, we'll have to give a party for the Jones!" and boxes of new cosmetics from the smartest shops. "Take care of your complexion, darling," wrote Della who strongly suspected several things despite Nevis' defiantly gay letters, "and you needn't give a damn what happens."

But they ate up the pate and caviar and the other things; and after a month or two of experimenting with skin foods and asstringents these lay idle in Nevis' bureau drawer, a prey to cockroaches and ants. Because even the exertion of message and heating water for steaming and of using a rubber patty strenuously was, after a while too much of an effort. And so she would let her hands fall to her sides and regard the salowness and roughness of her skin wearily, and feel the sweat start out on her forehead, and give it all up as a bad job.

But she wouldn't cry quits. She studied Spanish every day. She made Bill tell her every last little detail of his work, she worked with him as much as she could, following his mental processes arguing with him, discussing politics and police methods and ways and means. She said to herself her teeth set. I'll not give in before he does. (To Be Continued.)

Persia's Famous Peacock Throne Headed for the Auction Block

Jewel-Encrusted Seat of Shahs to Be Turned Into Cash for National Funds. Was Once Throne of Mogul Emperor of India.

If you have been thinking that the United States is having a difficult job to balance the budget, take a look at Persia. The romantic land of Omar Khayyam has been so hard hit by the depression that it is going to sell the very seat of government—the famous Peacock Throne, according to reports from reliable authorities. Shah Riza Khan Pahlavi, the present incumbent of the priceless seat, who rose from the lowly position of groom to become first gentleman of Persia, does not regard the famous heirloom with the same veneration as did members of the previous dynasty, born, as they were, to the purple, so the throne is to be turned into hard cash that will help the country through the remaining period of the universal slump. The Peacock Throne is said to have been built by Shah Jahan, Mogul Emperor of India, in 1634. It was carried off to Persia during a raid in 1739, and Delhi has been the traditional seat of Persian rulers. Many attempts have been made to form an accurate estimation of the intrinsic value of the historic piece of furniture, but no two experts have ever agreed on the figures. The cash value of the bauble has been variously fixed at from $19,000,000 to $160,000,000. The throne is in the form of a field bed, almost every inch of which is studded with precious stones, the number of which runs into thousands. The headrest of the throne is in the form of a peacock's tail, a gorgeous affair, the colors of which are worked out in diamonds, rubies, emeralds and other gems.

BUSY SESSION FOR ASSEMBLY

will ask re-enactment of practically all relief laws now on the books.

Representative-elect George J. Harter (D) of Summit county, will bring the prohibition law to a head. He plans to back a bill calling for a state-wide election on repeal or retention of the Ohio prohibition amendment. The measure may bear his name when it comes before the house.

Tax legislation undoubtedly will take up a major part of the time of the assembly.

Oakley Spaght (O), a member of the Summit county delegation, will be ready with sales tax bills on the opening day. He has not worked out details of the measure. There has been some talk of income and luxury taxes.

Gas, Auto Laws Up Again

The gasoline tax and motor vehicle license laws will be the subject of at least a half dozen bills. Senator D. J. Gunsett (D) of Van Wert and Senator Earl Lewis of St. Clairsville, the Republican floor leader, plan to strike at the motor vehicle license law. Senator Gunsett states that he will seek complete revision of the law, providing for a graduated scale of license fees, starting at $2 for all cars and a property tax based upon the value of the machine. Under this bill, $2 would go to the state, partly to finance the license administration; part would go to the highway fund, and property tax returns would accrue to the taxing district in which the car-owner resides.

Under Senator Lewis' plan, the licensing law would be revised to take into consideration the age of a machine and the table of fees would be similar to that used in the old type personal tax returns. Taxpayers of his district, the senator said, claim the present law is unjust and unfair because it fails to consider the age of a car. The present license law is based on horsepower.

Schools To Have Inning

The Ohio school survey commission is drawing up a bill embodying the Mott plan of school financing. This plan is designed to set up a minimum level of education throughout the state and to reduce the school tax burden now borne by real estate.

Battle Between Chicago, Pittsburgh Saves Season from "Washout"

McGraw Resignation One of Year's High Points; Set Few Records

By LES CONKLIN
International News Service Sports Writer

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—The season battle between the Cubs and Pirates for the National League pennant was the only feature that saved the major league baseball season from being a complete washout, as far as close competition of 1932 from being a complete titillation was concerned.

Yanks Outclass Field
The New York Yankees, with a prize collection of heavy hitters and brilliant tossers, began walking away from rival American League clubs early in June. They were 8½ games in front at the half-way place and never allowed any contender to get within striking distance of them thereafter, finishing 13 games ahead of the Athletics.

Then the Yanks slaughtered the Cubs in the World series in four straight games, running their string of victories in post-season classics to 12 straight games. The runaway triumph of the American Leaguers was a crushing blow to the National League, which had regained some of its lost prestige the year before when the St. Louis Cardinals stopped the Athletics.

The series was little more than a farce, with the Cubs almost helpless before the relentless power of the Yankees. Despite their big edge the latter were far from brilliant and performed in sloppy fashion. Numerous freak records were established, one of which was made in the fourth game when 19 runs were scored by the Cubs. The two teams were guilty of 14 errors and as many more mental blunders.

The Yanks hit eight home runs and the Cubs three, New York rolled up an astounding team average of .312 for the series. Lou Gehrig started at bat for the Yanks with a percentage of .529, while "Boss" Stephenson hit .444 for the Cubs.

Grimm Replaces Hornsby
Chicago became a different ball club after Charley Grimm replaced Rogers Hornsby as manager on Aug. 2. Five games behind Pittsburgh at the time, the Cubs started a drive that would have denied the resignation of Manager John McGraw on June 3 left disheartened in the ranks of the New York Giants and the club was hampered further by the loss of Shortstop Travis Jackson a few weeks later.

Jimmy Fox of the Athletics clouted 58 home runs, only two short of Babe Ruth's record; led the league in several other specialties and barely failed to win the batting title, which went to Dale Alexander of Boston.

Alexander, with a mark of .367, is the first Red Sox player to win the title. Frank O'Doul, of Brooklyn, with a mark of .338, won the National League batting championship by a wide margin.

Newark captured the International League pennant and won the Little World series from Minneapolis, four games to two. Chattanooga annexed the Southern association championship and Portland finished first in the Pacific Coast League.

Disappointment because of 1932 performance, a desire to pave the way for lighter races in 1933, and a yen for ready cash on the part of club owners all contributed to the unprecedented orgy of trading that set in after the close of the 1932 season.

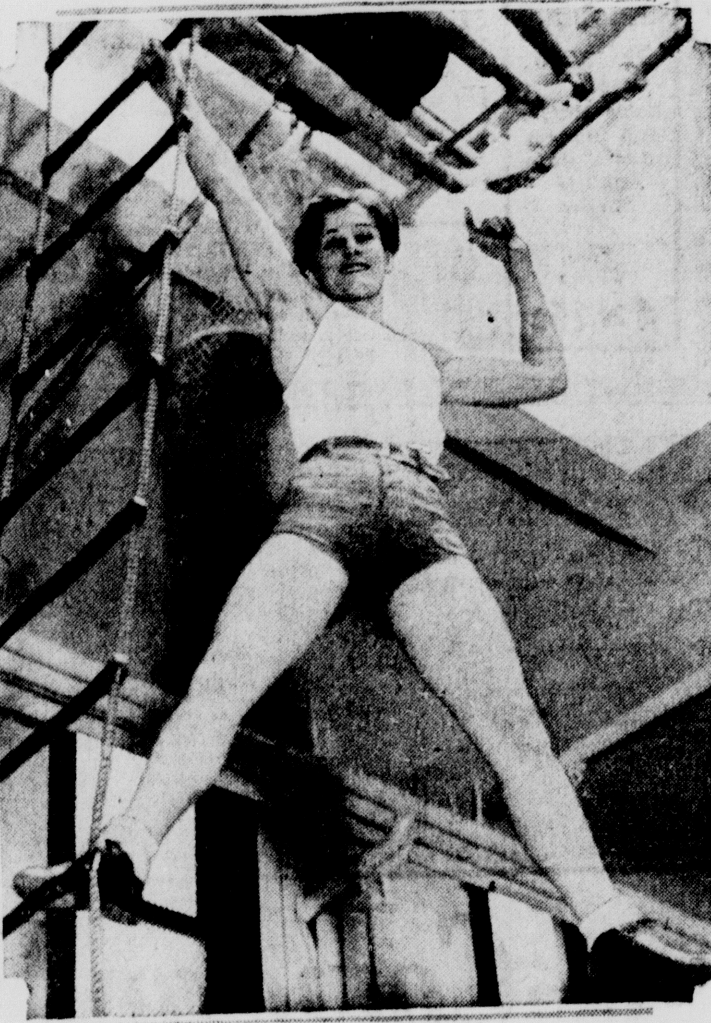

1932 Studded With Athletic Feats Rivaling Era of Dempsey's Reign; Depression Hurts

By DAVIS J. WALSH
International News Service Sports Editor

This year of grace A. D. 1932, will go down on the pages of time as the Great Zero of the ages, with the luxury known as sports struggling valiantly, gallantly and to no purpose under the burden of general poverty. Financially the institution of competitive sport fell upon evil days, even those bumper years when Dempsey, Humphrey, Ruth, Rickard Jones and Tilden were great and everybody was thinking in terms of town houses on Park Avenue.

U. S. Rules Olympics
America, for instance, won the greatest Olympic meet of them all, the books being practically wiped clean in an orgy of record breaking at Los Angeles. Gene Sarazen turned in two sparkling performances to win the British and American open golf championships in the same season, coming as close to Jones' "grand slam" as it was possible for a professional golfer to do. Indeed, Sarazen's 283 bettered the

Babe Turns To Gym Work

"Babe" Ruth, who recently announced her plans for a professional career, is shown here as she indulged in a workout in a Chicago club. In two workouts she won the praise of the coach for her skill in gymnastics, a sport she was unacquainted with heretofore. She stated she would leave shortly to fulfill radio, film and writing contracts.

Monopoly on Hurling Titles Held by Veterans Broken Up By Youthful Cub Sensation

(By Associated Press)
NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—Lonnie Warneke, a tall, lanky youngster, from Arkansas, who has plenty of "whip" in his right arm, has stepped out to break what was becoming a monopoly of the veteran pitchers of the National League.

Warneke, pitching his first full season in big league baseball, made himself a double champion and gathered in a few other odds and ends in the victory line during the 1932 season, the complete pitching records reveal.

Best In Effectiveness
He outshone the oldsters in effectiveness, allowing only 2.37 earned runs per nine innings game, won 22 games, more than any other pitcher in the league, and with only six errors gained the highest percentage, .786. He also tied for the shutout lead with four and as one of three pitchers to hurl more than 20 complete games.

In past seasons the veterans have finished at the top of the "earned run average" column with Southpaw Bill Walker of New York and right handed Dazzy Vance of Brooklyn dividing the honors for the past four years. Both of these veterans slumped badly last season. Allowing more than four runs per game and failing to pitch the ten complete games required for a place in the top division of "hard working" pitchers. They both were placed on the grading block, going to St. Louis.

Carl Hubbell Second
Carl Hubbell, New York southpaw, finished second in the earned run ratings. Walter (Huck) Betts of Boston, Steve Swetonic of Pittsburgh and Charles (Red) Lucas of Cincinnati, among the "regulars," also allowed fewer than three earned runs a game.

Herome Herman (Dizzy) Dean, of St. Louis tied with Swetonic and Warneke for shutout honors, led them all in strikeouts with 191. Hubbell pitched the longest list of batsmen, numbering 1,283.

The league's "greybeard" Jack Quinn, of Brooklyn, turned in the only record-breaking mound performance, finishing 31 games in his duties as a relief pitcher. "Wild Bill" Hallan of St. Louis tied another record by making three wild pitches in one inning against the Dodgers.

Warner Advocates Change in Scoring System in Football

BY ALAN GOULD,
Associated Press Sports Editor
NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—Glen Warner, who soon will transfer his work bench from Stanford to Temple, "Baseball man" recognized this when he began to use a livelier ball. The change (I suggest for football) would make the game less common and would make the best team more likely to win.

Given In Letter
Warner's views were contained in a letter to Gilmore Dobie of Cornell, and urged more simplification and more safeguards in the rules, rather than any other changes in the code which he found satisfactory for 1932.

Philly Infielder Leads National; New Records Set

National League fielding records for the 1932 season find Frank O. Hurst, Philadelphia, leading the first basemen, with a percentage of .983. Walter J. Marandine, Boston, had the highest average of the second basemen, with .975. The leader among the third basemen is Arthur C. Whitney, Philadelphia, with a mark of .969. William F. Jurgens, Chicago, leads the shortstops with .964.

Walter A. Berger, Boston, tops the outfielders with .993, which ties the record held by Louis B. Duncan, Cincinnati, made in 1923. R. Earl Grace, Pittsburgh, is the leading catcher with .998, a new league record which displaces the mark of .996 made by J. Francis Hogan, New York, in 1931. Grace established a new league record by accepting 44 chances without error on Aug. 29, 1931, to Sept. 8, 1932, making his first error on the latter date. Ernest Lombardi, Cincinnati, allowed most passed balls, 17.

Club Fielding Features
Boston leads in club fielding with a percentage of .976, a new record, was .975, made by Chicago in 1929. Boston also had the most putouts, 4,235. Brooklyn made most double plays, 169, and most assists, 1969.

Cincinnati allowed most passed balls, 20, and had most men left on bases, 1,199. Philadelphia had fewest passed balls, four, tying the record made by St. Louis in 1925 and equaled by New York in 1928. Philadelphia committed most errors, 6,699. Fewer assists were made in 1932 than in any other year, only 14,683 being recorded as against 15,020 in 1930, the record low number.

New York tied the record for double plays in a nine-inning game by making six on Aug. 12. Record was made by Cincinnati, June 20, 1925, and equaled by Pittsburgh, Sept. 23, 1925, and New York, May 15, 1928.

Chicago made a new club record with one assist on Aug. 23.

Greenleaf Real Cue "Wizard"

When it comes to what we call "pool" but what the experts call pocket billiards there is still only one man in the game—Ralph Greenleaf.

Greenleaf has won his twelfth championship and once again he won it with ridiculous ease. Jake Schaeffer is still the 182 professional champion while August Kieckhefer still wears his cushion crown.

In the amateur field Francis Appleby retained his 181 title while J. Howard Shoemaker proved once again that he was king of the pocket billiard world.

However, billiard people still point to Willie Hoppe as the greatest all around ball chamer.

Year Marked by Many Unusual Feats Here; Softball Leads Field

Taking a firm stranglehold on interest of fans, community athletic events occupied the spotlight in Salem during 1932, forcing even activities involving schoolboy representatives of Salem High into the background.

It was a great and highly successful period for civic sporting competitions, perhaps not so much so from a financial standpoint, but from the intense and unprecedented interest of the non-participant.

Backers of scholastic activities here are more sorry for the year's existence than they are over its passing. The past 12 months found Salem High's prestige in athletics suffer seriously.

Local Grid, Cage Titles
After monopolizing the Columbiana county football championship for six consecutive years the Quakers were subdued twice in county competition, losing the crown to Wellsville. The basketball championship too, was lost, and was won by East Liverpool High.

Basketballers of the school, however, finding themselves, made a great recovery, and came back to win the district championship in the district championship, only to lose their first start in sectional contests at Akron.

Golf and tennis were minor sports of importance at the school but some fame came to Salem through the city's track and field athletes. They conquered all opposition to retain championship honors in the Northeastern Ohio Big Ten, the county, Northwestern Ohio sectional, then finished fourth in the state interscholastic meet at Columbus.

Win Relay Crown
The Quaker track and field team made a romp of the annual Salem night relay carnival, vanquishing more than 300 invading athletes to retain their title.

Football was the big thorn in the Salem side. But two victories were obtained out of nine contests, one resulting in a tie while Wellsville and East Liverpool, traditional arch-enemies of the Quaker City, both triumphed over the Red and Black.

Out of this football season, however, came one bright high spot. It proved that Salem fans, ever faithful to their own scholastic representatives, can and will support a loser.

Without countless Ohio scholastic treasurers found themselves in the "red" all during the year, the attendance at Salem games, decreased over past years, of course, continued to enable the school to pay off all indebtedness and still finish ahead.

Some Interesting Events
There were some interesting events, mainly arising out of the track and field season. During that period numerous Salem school records were careened into oblivion before great performances of modern stars; the team maintained its prestige in the state if others did not, and set up marks that coming stars will find hard to erase from records.

There was a spectacular gridiron conflict with East Liverpool in which the Potters snatched victory from defeat in late periods. There was a sensational punting performance by Captain Gordon Keyes in the Lisbon game, when he set what is believed by many sports recorders as a record booting the ball eight times for a 52-yard average.

There was the stellar performance of Wayne Sidinger in the Warren basketball tournament in which he was adjudged the most valuable player; record-breaking feats by William Pauline, Wayne Russell and Harold Horstman in track and field events.

There were other bright events also, standing out as redeeming factors in a somewhat dismal year. But, taken all in all, 1932 was far from a popular member of the year family as far as school backers are concerned.

Fans Like City Sports
The general fandom, for the first time in history, finding out that great entertainment is available in community athletics, began placing some attention on those events. They journeyed to Centennial park in throngs to watch softball league games; they flocked to the Memorial building gymnasium to witness thrilling basketball contests.

Perhaps this unprecedented action by fans may be a direct result of the depression. Fathers and mothers began cutting down on the funds paid out for entertainment and set aside nickels and dimes for softball and basketball games. They found out for themselves these sports offered unusual entertainment.

rapped by a planted note, James Sallee (left), 21, of Philadelphia, is own after his arrest on a charge of extortion in attempting to kidnap Miss Dearden (right), 19-year-old daughter of a Philadelphia publisher. The prisoner said he formerly attended the same public school as Miss Dearden and that he tried extortion only after he became desperate, being out of work. Sallee had sent notes to the girl's father threatening to kidnap his daughter and blow up his house if he did not pay $5,000.

TODAY'S RADIO PROGRAMS

Welcoming of the New Year in foreign lands will give American radio listeners an opportunity to start rather early in their celebration Saturday evening.

Besides the dancing parties planned for midnight and after by the two networks, each has made arrangements to broadcast samples of the greeting to 133 as it is done in England, Germany and Buenos Aires.

To start festivities, WABC-CBS is going to Leipzig, Germany at 5:55 to pick up the student chorus there. This will be followed later by the ringing of Big Ben in the tower of parliament building, London.

WEAF-NBC joins in at 6 with a London celebration which will include Big Ben. At the same time WJZ-NBC cuts in microphones in the aus Vaterland, a night club deluxe in Berlin.

The Buenos Aires festivities open at 10:45 over WJZ-NBC.

The Pickens Sisters and the Rollickers quartet are to replace Frank Munn and Virginia Rea as singers in Paul Whiteman's Monday night program on WEAF-NBC—De Wolfe Hopper has signed another contract which extends his appearances in the WABC-CBS Roses and Drums several weeks more.
